4 learning theories

Here are some learning theories that allow for a better understanding of learning process.

Behaviorism – reacting to external stimuli (understand, remember)

Cognitivism – acquiring and storing information (create, evaluate)

Constructivism – constructing subjective reality (analyze, apply)

Connectivism – connecting specialized nodes or information sources (recognize, connect)

Which way do you learn? A combined approach can be beneficial.

Student Spotlight with Travis Handfield

"If you have a passion for something, pursue it. As the world gets even more flat and competitive, you should make yourself more marketable and indispensable."

Travis works as a Financial Controller at Blue Heron Aviation Ltd. in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Why did you decide to pursue a graduate degree?

I am a firm believer in investing in oneself. I find that I am naturally an academic person who loves the challenge that continuous studies bring. Since starting my college career back in 2005, I've never stopped expanding my knowledge base. Ultimately, I see myself as a professor, and a PhD is usually a prerequisite for tenure within academia.

Why did you decide to study at Charisma University?

Staying local and cost were the deciding factors when evaluating my options for pursuing a PhD program. I've obtained degrees on two continents already, now is the time to achieve academic success within my home territory.

What is it specifically that attracted you to this program?

The course structure was attractive. I can plan my week around my deadlines and manage my time accordingly. The precise mapping of the modules aids in preparing me for ultimately transitioning into the core of the PhD programme - which is the dissertation.

What was the best surprise about Charisma University?

The affordability of the courses. Achieving multiple degrees from home is now a dream within reach of anyone prepared to put in the time and effort.

What aspect of your graduate program do you enjoy the most or are looking forward to with the greatest curiosity?

I am eager to make a start on my dissertation. Since successfully passing my comprehensive exam, I am even more excited to get started – becoming a PhD Candidate, no longer student.

What aspect of your life are you now more prepared for?

I successfully completed a Master of Science degree at the University of Leeds, which included a dissertation component. Going through this process gave me a taste of the research process and the confidence and assurance that I could undertake original research at a PhD level.

What do you like to do for fun? Without a doubt, it is fishing and backyard gardening.

Are you a Charisma student doing something important for your community? We want to hear about it. You can also send us your article (400-500 words) to be published in our newsletter. We would love to hear from you.
